Groundbreaking of the Lennox Library and Community Service Center

The oldest library in the Los Angeles County's public library system and the adjacent Sheriff's station in Lennox are getting makeovers. On Wednesday August 29, construction begins on both the old Sheriff's station, which will be transformed into a new, 7,200-square-foot community service center, and the library, which will more than double in size, becoming a 10,000-square-foot, state-of-the-art facility. Once completed, the new community center will house meeting rooms, a Second District field office, and office space for various County Departments. The remodeled library also will include a community meeting room, as well as a teen study room, children's library, homework center, audio-visual area, and nine public access computers.
